

FIVE MEXICAN OFFICERS KILLED; GUARDS ADMIT SHOOTING WOUNDED

Lem Spillsbury Says Two Lieutenant Colonels, Captain and Lieutenant Killed in Addition to Gen. Gomez at Carrizal; Mob Threatened U. S. Prisoners at Ahumada; Scout Silenced Machine Gun.

TWO lieutenant colonels, a captain and a lieutenant of the Mexican army were killed, in addition to Gen. Gomez, at the battle of Carrizal, according to the story of the battle told by Lem Spillsbury upon his arrival on the American side of the border Thursday afternoon.

Spillsbury also stated that the Mexican guard placed over them at Carrizal told him that the Mexican soldiers were shooting the wounded left on the field after the fight. Spillsbury was fighting with the soldiers until forced to surrender and says he succeeded in silencing one of the machine guns.

CONDUCTOR WAS IN GREAT DANGER

He Suffered With Pains Throughout His Entire Body. Thought He Had Pleurisy

"Twenty-five percent of our educated people die because of ignorance," is the recent statement of a noted scientist. Although paradoxical, the truth of this statement is significant, especially with respect to those who live in the cities. After a world-wide search, Plant Juice was discovered, which is a combination of plants from the juices of which was extracted a tonic that has proven to be the greatest of all known remedies for the stomach, liver, kidneys and blood. This is now widely known throughout the larger cities of the country on account of its revivifying and reconstructive action, which is so apparent that the user finds himself infused with new life and his bodily ills vanish as if by magic.

Plant Juice is daily gaining converts throughout the country as is attested by the following testimonial of Mr. G. C. Bean, who lives at No. 51 Franklin Street, Boston, Mass., and is a street car conductor. "I have had stomach trouble, indigestion and dyspepsia for the past three years. My food fermented in my stomach, causing gas and a heavy, bloated condition, with severe pains all over my body and I thought that I had pleurisy. I was restless and could not sleep at night. I had tried a great many kinds of medicine, but got no benefit whatever from any of them. I heard of Plant Juice and have taken it for a short time, and I can now say that I have no pain whatever and am feeling like a new man. I can recommend it to everyone, for it is a first-class tonic for stomach trouble and I feel 50 per cent better."

Plant Juice is sold in El Paso at Kelly & Pollard's Drug Store.—Afr.

This Actually Devitalizes Coarse Hairy Growths

Stubborn growths of coarse hair which have been caused by the use of pastes, rub-on preparations and worthless imitations of De Miraclo, which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin, can only be devitalized with De Miraclo, the original liquid hair remover, because it attacks hair under the skin as well as on the skin. Well-groomed women always use De Miraclo for removing hair from the face, neck, arms, legs and under the arms. De Miraclo never disappoints. Buy it by name and you will get the only depilatory that has a binding guarantee in each package which entitles you to your money back if it fails. In 50c, $1.00 and $2.00 bottles, at your dealer's or direct, postpaid, in plain wrapper. De Miraclo Chemical Co., Dept. A-4, Park Ave. and 129th St., New York.

UP-TO-DATE 7-PASSENGER CARS,
$2.00 PER HOUR.

AUTOS
PHONES—506-510
AUTO LIVERY CO.
Oliver Carr, Mgr., 418 San Antonio St.

Had Machine Gun.

Then they started to come down on the left flank with the machine gun.

Spillsbury's story of the events leading up to the Carrizal fight, with the details of the fight and what happened after they were captured, is the first detailed story to be told of the entire affair since it occurred.

This story as told to The Herald Thursday evening in his own words is as follows:

"We left Colonia Dublan Sunday morning, June 18, en route to Villa Ahumada.

Capt. Boyd, Lieut. Adair and 28 men were in the party. The first day's march was from Dublan to Galeana River.

The second day's march from there to San Luis ranch on Santa Maria river.

We left there at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning and marched to Santo Domingo and arrived at Santo Domingo at 10 o'clock on June 20.

We were joined there by R. troop at 5:30 p. m. of the 20th, under Capt. Morey. It was composed of 25 men including Capt. Morey. We left there on the morning of the 21st at 5 a. m. and marched to the irrigation ditch, one-half mile west of Carrizal. We waded our horses there and sent a Mexican courier to get permission to pass through the town as there were Carrancista troops there and we wished to pass through without any trouble.

Advance Guard.

"They immediately sent an advance guard of eight men. Lieut. Col. Rivas was in command. He asked Capt. Boyd what was his mission and Capt. Boyd told me to tell them that we were in pursuit of a deserter who had left the Villa Ahumada and we understood that he was in the neighborhood of Santo Domingo and wished to investigate this. Col. Rivas then stated that the deserter had been sent to El Paso, and if there were any bandits in the country that they (the Carrancistas) must be them and he had orders from Gen. Gomez to stop our advance until further investigation was made. Capt. Boyd then requested to see Gen. Gomez in person. Col. Rivas sent immediately for him to notify Gen. Felix B. Gomez that Capt. Boyd wanted to see him. In the meantime this courier had come with a letter from Gomez to Rivas, stating to Capt. Boyd to move into town with his troops for further conference. Capt. Boyd had told them that he had an order that required him to go through this town on a peaceful mission. His note was sent to the jefe politico and he told the jefe politico therein to notify the military authorities.

Did Not Want to Enter Town.

"Capt. Boyd did not like this idea of going into town as he could see movements of troops on the right flank and on the left. So then he told Col. Rivas that he would like to see Gen. Gomez in person. He sent the courier after him and Gen. Gomez came right out. Gen. Gomez asked us where we were going and what was our mission and we told him the same thing that the courier told before. He said that he had orders from Gen. Trevino to stop American troops going west, south or east and the only way they could pass was through him, however, that if Capt. Boyd would wait a couple of three hours he would let them pass and see if he could get the pass for him. Capt. Boyd told him that he could not wait that he guessed he would have to come on in. Gen. Gomez said it was all right, you will have to walk over our dead bodies."

Had to Obey Orders.

"Capt. Boyd was very sorry but that the only way that he knew to obey an order was to carry it out. Then we retreated back to our column and Gen. Gomez did the same. Capt. Boyd gave the instructions to his men that I did not hear all of them but one order was for his men not to fire until they were fired upon. He told Capt. Morey to take care of the right flank and Lieut. Adair the left. They dismounted and started to advance in column line. I asked Capt. Boyd what he wanted me to do. He was kind of undecided what the Mexicans were going to do. He did not know whether they were going to open fire or whether they were running a bluff on us.

Firing Started.

"I asked him what I was to do and he said to follow him. I gave my men the order and he hardly had taken him when the firing started. The boys said that the Mexicans started the firing. I think they did so because of the orders. I was not up in front. I was back about 20 feet in the rear of Capt. Boyd, right straight back of him. When this machine gun, the Mexicans had, opened up on us the Americans all fell to the ground and returned the fire. The last thing I heard of Capt. Boyd was to his men was to charge the machine gun. They did so. They would fire and run a piece and then drop down and then reload and fire again. In the meantime there was quite a number of Mexicans who came down on our left flank and also a bunch on the right flank, and they came from up in the trees. We had never noticed these before.

Had Machine Gun.

Then they started to come down on the left flank with the machine gun.

Spillsbury's story of the events leading up to the Carrizal fight, with the details of the fight and what happened after they were captured, is the first detailed story to be told of the entire affair since it occurred.

This story as told to The Herald Thursday evening in his own words is as follows:

"We left Colonia Dublan Sunday morning, June 18, en route to Villa Ahumada.

Capt. Boyd, Lieut. Adair and 28 men were in the party. The first day's march was from Dublan to Galeana River.

The second day's march from there to San Luis ranch on Santa Maria river.

We left there at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning and marched to Santo Domingo and arrived at Santo Domingo at 10 o'clock on June 20.

We were joined there by R. troop at 5:30 p. m. of the 20th, under Capt. Morey. It was composed of 25 men including Capt. Morey. We left there on the morning of the 21st at 5 a. m. and marched to the irrigation ditch, one-half mile west of Carrizal. We waded our horses there and sent a Mexican courier to get permission to pass through the town as there were Carrancista troops there and we wished to pass through without any trouble.

Advance Guard.

"They immediately sent an advance guard of eight men. Lieut. Col. Rivas was in command. He asked Capt. Boyd what was his mission and Capt. Boyd told me to tell them that we were in pursuit of a deserter who had left the Villa Ahumada and we understood that he was in the neighborhood of Santo Domingo and wished to investigate this. Col. Rivas then stated that the deserter had been sent to El Paso, and if there were any bandits in the country that they (the Carrancistas) must be them and he had orders from Gen. Gomez to stop our advance until further investigation was made. Capt. Boyd then requested to see Gen. Gomez in person. Col. Rivas sent immediately for him to notify Gen. Felix B. Gomez that Capt. Boyd wanted to see him. In the meantime this courier had come with a letter from Gomez to Rivas, stating to Capt. Boyd to move into town with his troops for further conference. Capt. Boyd had told them that he had an order that required him to go through this town on a peaceful mission. His note was sent to the jefe politico and he told the jefe politico therein to notify the military authorities.

Did Not Want to Enter Town.

"Capt. Boyd did not like this idea of going into town as he could see movements of troops on the right flank and on the left. So then he told Col. Rivas that he would like to see Gen. Gomez in person. He sent the courier after him and Gen. Gomez came right out. Gen. Gomez asked us where we were going and what was our mission and we told him the same thing that the courier told before. He said that he had orders from Gen. Trevino to stop American troops going west, south or east and the only way they could pass was through him, however, that if Capt. Boyd would wait a couple of three hours he would let them pass and see if he could get the pass for him. Capt. Boyd told him that he could not wait that he guessed he would have to come on in. Gen. Gomez said it was all right, you will have to walk over our dead bodies."

Had to Obey Orders.

"Capt. Boyd was very sorry but that the only way that he knew to obey an order was to carry it out. Then we retreated back to our column and Gen. Gomez did the same. Capt. Boyd gave the instructions to his men that I did not hear all of them but one order was for his men not to fire until they were fired upon. He told Capt. Morey to take care of the right flank and Lieut. Adair the left. They dismounted and started to advance in column line. I asked Capt. Boyd what he wanted me to do. He was kind of undecided what the Mexicans were going to do. He did not know whether they were going to open fire or whether they were running a bluff on us.

Firing Started.

"I asked him what I was to do and he said to follow him. I gave my men the order and he hardly had taken him when the firing started. The boys said that the Mexicans started the firing. I think they did so because of the orders. I was not up in front. I was back about 20 feet in the rear of Capt. Boyd, right straight back of him. When this machine gun, the Mexicans had, opened up on us the Americans all fell to the ground and returned the fire. The last thing I heard of Capt. Boyd was to his men was to charge the machine gun. They did so. They would fire and run a piece and then drop down and then reload and fire again. In the meantime there was quite a number of Mexicans who came down on our left flank and also a bunch on the right flank, and they came from up in the trees. We had never noticed these before.

Had Machine Gun.

Then they started to come down on the left flank with the machine gun.

Spillsbury's story of the events leading up to the Carrizal fight, with the details of the fight and what happened after they were captured, is the first detailed story to be told of the entire affair since it occurred.

This story as told to The Herald Thursday evening in his own words is as follows:

"We left Colonia Dublan Sunday morning, June 18, en route to Villa Ahumada.

Capt. Boyd, Lieut. Adair and 28 men were in the party. The first day's march was from Dublan to Galeana River.

The second day's march from there to San Luis ranch on Santa Maria river.

We left there at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning and marched to Santo Domingo and arrived at Santo Domingo at 10 o'clock on June 20.

We were joined there by R. troop at 5:30 p. m. of the 20th, under Capt. Morey. It was composed of 25 men including Capt. Morey. We left there on the morning of the 21st at 5 a. m. and marched to the irrigation ditch, one-half mile west of Carrizal. We waded our horses there and sent a Mexican courier to get permission to pass through the town as there were Carrancista troops there and we wished to pass through without any trouble.

Advance Guard.

"They immediately sent an advance guard of eight men. Lieut. Col. Rivas was in command. He asked Capt. Boyd what was his mission and Capt. Boyd told me to tell them that we were in pursuit of a deserter who had left the Villa Ahumada and we understood that he was in the neighborhood of Santo Domingo and wished to investigate this. Col. Rivas then stated that the deserter had been sent to El Paso, and if there were any bandits in the country that they (the Carrancistas) must be them and he had orders from Gen. Gomez to stop our advance until further investigation was made. Capt. Boyd then requested to see Gen. Gomez in person. Col. Rivas sent immediately for him to notify Gen. Felix B. Gomez that Capt. Boyd wanted to see him. In the meantime this courier had come with a letter from Gomez to Rivas, stating to Capt. Boyd to move into town with his troops for further conference. Capt. Boyd had told them that he had an order that required him to go through this town on a peaceful mission. His note was sent to the jefe politico and he told the jefe politico therein to notify the military authorities.

Did Not Want to Enter Town.

"Capt. Boyd did not like this idea of going into town as he could see movements of troops on the right flank and on the left. So then he told Col. Rivas that he would like to see Gen. Gomez in person. He sent the courier after him and Gen. Gomez came right out. Gen. Gomez asked us where we were going and what was our mission and we told him the same thing that the courier told before. He said that he had orders from Gen. Trevino to stop American troops going west, south or east and the only way they could pass was through him, however, that if Capt. Boyd would wait a couple of three hours he would let them pass and see if he could get the pass for him. Capt. Boyd told him that he could not wait that he guessed he would have to come on in. Gen. Gomez said it was all right, you will have to walk over our dead bodies."

Had to Obey Orders.

"Capt. Boyd was very sorry but that the only way that he knew to obey an order was to carry it out. Then we retreated back to our column and Gen. Gomez did the same. Capt. Boyd gave the instructions to his men that I did not hear all of them but one order was for his men not to fire until they were fired upon. He told Capt. Morey to take care of the right flank and Lieut. Adair the left. They dismounted and started to advance in column line. I asked Capt. Boyd what he wanted me to do. He was kind of undecided what the Mexicans were going to do. He did not know whether they were going to open fire or whether they were running a bluff on us.

Firing Started.

"I asked him what I was to do and he said to follow him. I gave my men the order and he hardly had taken him when the firing started. The boys said that the Mexicans started the firing. I think they did so because of the orders. I was not up in front. I was back about 20 feet in the rear of Capt. Boyd, right straight back of him. When this machine gun, the Mexicans had, opened up on us the Americans all fell to the ground and returned the fire. The last thing I heard of Capt. Boyd was to his men was to charge the machine gun. They did so. They would fire and run a piece and then drop down and then reload and fire again. In the meantime there was quite a number of Mexicans who came down on our left flank and also a bunch on the right flank, and they came from up in the trees. We had never noticed these before.

Had Machine Gun.

Then they started to come down on the left flank with the machine gun.

Spillsbury's story of the events leading up to the Carrizal fight, with the details of the fight and what happened after they were captured, is the first detailed story to be told of the entire affair since it occurred.

This story as told to The Herald Thursday evening in his own words is as follows:

"We left Colonia Dublan Sunday morning, June 18, en route to Villa Ahumada.

Capt. Boyd, Lieut. Adair and 28 men were in the party. The first day's march was from Dublan to Galeana River.

The second day's march from there to San Luis ranch on Santa Maria river.

We left there at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning and marched to Santo Domingo and arrived at Santo Domingo at 10 o'clock on June 20.

We were joined there by R. troop at 5:30 p. m. of the 20th, under Capt. Morey. It was composed of 25 men including Capt. Morey. We left there on the morning of the 21st at 5 a. m. and marched to the irrigation ditch, one-half mile west of Carrizal. We waded our horses there and sent a Mexican courier to get permission to pass through the town as there were Carrancista troops there and we wished to pass through without any trouble.

Advance Guard.

"They immediately sent an advance guard of eight men. Lieut. Col. Rivas was in command. He asked Capt. Boyd what was his mission and Capt. Boyd told me to tell them that we were in pursuit of a deserter who had left the Villa Ahumada and we understood that he was in the neighborhood of Santo Domingo and wished to investigate this. Col. Rivas then stated that the deserter had been sent to El Paso, and if there were any bandits in the country that they (the Carrancistas) must be them and he had orders from Gen. Gomez to stop our advance until further investigation was made. Capt. Boyd then requested to see Gen. Gomez in person. Col. Rivas sent immediately for him to notify Gen. Felix B. Gomez that Capt. Boyd wanted to see him. In the meantime this courier had come with a letter from Gomez to Rivas, stating to Capt. Boyd to move into town with his troops for further conference. Capt. Boyd had told them that he had an order that required him to go through this town on a peaceful mission. His note was sent to the jefe politico and he told the jefe politico therein to notify the military authorities.

Did Not Want to Enter Town.

"Capt. Boyd did not like this idea of going into town as he could see movements of troops on the right flank and on the left. So then he told Col. Rivas that he would like to see Gen. Gomez in person. He sent the courier after him and Gen. Gomez came right out. Gen. Gomez asked us where we were going and what was our mission and we told him the same thing that the courier told before. He said that he had orders from Gen. Trevino to stop American troops going west, south or east and the only way they could pass was through him, however, that if Capt. Boyd would wait a couple of three hours he would let them pass and see if he could get the pass for him. Capt. Boyd told him that he could not wait that he guessed he would have to come on in. Gen. Gomez said it was all right, you will have to walk over our dead bodies."

Had to Obey Orders.

"Capt. Boyd was very sorry but that the only way that he knew to obey an order was to carry it out. Then we retreated back to our column and Gen. Gomez did the same. Capt. Boyd gave the instructions to his men that I did not hear all of them but one order was for his men not to fire until they were fired upon. He told Capt. Morey to take care of the right flank and Lieut. Adair the left. They dismounted and started to advance in column line. I asked Capt. Boyd what he wanted me to do. He was kind of undecided what the Mexicans were going to do. He did not know whether they were going to open fire or whether they were running a bluff on us.

Firing Started.

"I asked him what I was to do and he said to follow him. I gave my men the order and he hardly had taken him when the firing started. The boys said that the Mexicans started the firing. I think they did so because of the orders. I was not up in front. I was back about 20 feet in the rear of Capt. Boyd, right straight back of him. When this machine gun, the Mexicans had, opened up on us the Americans all fell to the ground and returned the fire. The last thing I heard of Capt. Boyd was to his men was to charge the machine gun. They did so. They would fire and run a piece and then drop down and then reload and fire again. In the meantime there was quite a number of Mexicans who came down on our left flank and also a bunch on the right flank, and they came from up in the trees. We had never noticed these before.

Had Machine Gun.

Then they started to come down on the left flank with the machine gun.

Spillsbury's story of the events leading up to the Carrizal fight, with the details of the fight and what happened after they were captured, is the first detailed story to be told of the entire affair since it occurred.

This story as told to The Herald Thursday evening in his own words is as follows:

"We left Colonia Dublan Sunday morning, June 18, en route to Villa Ahumada.

Capt. Boyd, Lieut. Adair and 28 men were in the party. The first day's march was from Dublan to Galeana River.

The second day's march from there to San Luis ranch on Santa Maria river.

We left there at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning and marched to Santo Domingo and arrived at Santo Domingo at 10 o'clock on June 20.

We were joined there by R. troop at 5:30 p. m. of the 20th, under Capt. Morey. It was composed of 25 men including Capt. Morey. We left there on the morning of the 21st at 5 a. m. and marched to the irrigation ditch, one-half mile west of Carrizal. We waded our horses there and sent a Mexican courier to get permission to pass through the town as there were Carrancista troops there and we wished to pass through without any trouble.

Advance Guard.

"They immediately sent an advance guard of eight men. Lieut. Col. Rivas was in command. He asked Capt. Boyd what was his mission and Capt. Boyd told me to tell them that we were in pursuit of a deserter who had left the Villa Ahumada and we understood that he was in the neighborhood of Santo Domingo and wished to investigate this. Col. Rivas then stated that the deserter had been sent to El Paso, and if there were any bandits in the country that they (the Carrancistas) must be them and he had orders from Gen. Gomez to stop our advance until further investigation was made. Capt. Boyd then requested to see Gen. Gomez in person. Col. Rivas sent immediately for him to notify Gen. Felix B. Gomez that Capt. Boyd wanted to see him. In the meantime this courier had come with a letter from Gomez to Rivas, stating to Capt. Boyd to move into town with his troops for further conference. Capt. Boyd had told them that he had an order that required him to go through this town on a peaceful mission. His note was sent to the jefe politico and he told the jefe politico therein to notify the military authorities.

Did Not Want to Enter Town.

"Capt. Boyd did not like this idea of going into town as he could see movements of troops on the right flank and on the left. So then he told Col. Rivas that he would like to see Gen. Gomez in person. He sent the courier after him and Gen. Gomez came right out. Gen. Gomez asked us where we were going and what was our mission and we told him the same thing that the courier told before. He said that he had orders from Gen. Trevino to stop American troops going west, south or east and the only way they could pass was through him, however, that if Capt. Boyd would wait a couple of three hours he would let them pass and see if he could get the pass for him. Capt. Boyd told him that he could not wait that he guessed he would have to come on in. Gen. Gomez said it was all right, you will have to walk over our dead bodies."

Had to Obey Orders.

"Capt. Boyd was very sorry but that the only way that he knew to obey an order was to carry it out. Then we retreated back to our column and Gen. Gomez did the same. Capt. Boyd gave the instructions to his men that I did not hear all of them but one order was for his men not to fire until they were fired upon. He told Capt. Morey to take care of the right flank and Lieut. Adair the left. They dismounted and started to advance in column line. I asked Capt. Boyd what he wanted me to do. He was kind of undecided what the Mexicans were going to do. He did not know whether they were going to open fire or whether they were running a bluff on us.

Firing Started.

"I asked him what I was to do and he said to follow him. I gave my men the order and he hardly had taken him when the firing started. The boys said that the Mexicans started the firing. I think they did so because of the orders. I was not up in front. I was back about 20 feet in the rear of Capt. Boyd, right straight back of him. When this machine gun, the Mexicans had, opened up on us the Americans all fell to the ground and returned the fire. The last thing I heard of Capt. Boyd was to his men was to charge the machine gun. They did so. They would fire and run a piece and then drop down and then reload and fire again. In the meantime there was quite a number of Mexicans who came down on our left flank and also a bunch on the right flank, and they came from up in the trees. We had never noticed these before.

Had Machine Gun.

Then they started to come down on the left flank with the machine gun.

Spillsbury's story of the events leading up to the Carrizal fight, with the details of the fight and what happened after they were captured, is the first detailed story to be told of the entire affair since it occurred.

This story as told to The Herald Thursday evening in his own words is as follows:

"We left Colonia Dublan Sunday morning, June 18, en route to Villa Ahumada.

Capt. Boyd, Lieut. Adair and 28 men were in the party. The first day's march was from Dublan to Galeana River.

The second day's march from there to San Luis ranch on Santa Maria river.

We left there at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning and marched to Santo Domingo and arrived at Santo Domingo at 10 o'clock on June 20.

We were joined there by R. troop at 5:30 p. m. of the 20th, under Capt. Morey. It was composed of 25 men including Capt. Morey. We left there on the morning of the 21st at 5 a. m. and marched to the irrigation ditch, one-half mile west of Carrizal. We waded our horses there and sent a Mexican courier to get permission to pass through the town as there were Carrancista troops there and we wished to pass through without any trouble.

Advance Guard.

"They immediately sent an advance guard of eight men. Lieut. Col. Rivas was in command. He asked Capt. Boyd what was his mission and Capt. Boyd told me to tell them that we were in pursuit of a deserter who had left the Villa Ahumada and we understood that he was in the neighborhood of Santo Domingo and wished to investigate this. Col. Rivas then stated that the deserter had been sent to El Paso, and if there were any bandits in the country that they (the Carrancistas) must be them and he had orders from Gen. Gomez to stop our advance until further investigation was made. Capt. Boyd then requested to see Gen. Gomez in person. Col. Rivas sent immediately for him to notify Gen. Felix B. Gomez that Capt. Boyd wanted to see him. In the meantime this courier had come with a letter from Gomez to Rivas, stating to Capt. Boyd to move into town with his troops for further conference. Capt. Boyd had told them that he had an order that required him to go through this town on a peaceful mission. His note was sent to the jefe politico and he told the jefe politico therein to notify the military authorities.

Did Not Want to Enter Town.

"Capt. Boyd did not like this idea of going into town as he could see movements of troops on the right flank and on the left. So then he told Col. Rivas that he would like to see Gen. Gomez in person. He sent the courier after him and Gen. Gomez came right out. Gen. Gomez asked us where we were going and what was our mission and we told him the same thing that the courier told before. He said that he had orders from Gen. Trevino to stop American troops going west, south or east and the only way they could pass was through him, however, that if Capt. Boyd would wait a couple of three hours he would let them pass and see if he could get the pass for him. Capt. Boyd told him that he could not wait that he guessed he would have to come on in. Gen. Gomez said it was all right, you will have to walk over our dead bodies."

Had to Obey Orders.

"Capt. Boyd was very sorry but that the only way that he knew to obey an order was to carry it out. Then we retreated back to our column and Gen. Gomez did the same. Capt. Boyd gave the instructions to his men that I did not hear all of them but one order was for his men not to fire until they were fired upon. He told Capt. Morey to take care of the right flank and Lieut. Adair the left. They dismounted and started to advance in column line. I asked Capt. Boyd what he wanted me to do. He was kind of undecided what the Mexicans were going to do. He did not know whether they were going to open fire or whether they were running a bluff on us.

Firing Started.

"I asked him what I was to do and he said to follow him. I gave my men the order and he hardly had taken him when the firing started. The boys said that the Mexicans started the firing. I think they did so because of the orders. I was not up in front. I was back about 20 feet in the rear of Capt. Boyd, right straight back of him. When this machine gun, the Mexicans had, opened up on us the Americans all fell to the ground and returned the fire. The last thing I heard of Capt. Boyd was to his men was to charge the machine gun. They did so. They would fire and run a piece and then drop down and then reload and fire again. In the meantime there was quite a number of Mexicans who came down on our left flank and also a bunch on the right flank, and they came from up in the trees. We had never noticed these before.

Had Machine Gun.

Then they started to come down on the left flank with the machine gun.

Spillsbury's story of the events leading up to the Carrizal fight, with the details of the fight and what happened after they were captured, is the first detailed story to be told of the entire affair since it occurred.

This story as told to The Herald Thursday evening in his own words is as follows:

"We left Colonia Dublan Sunday morning, June 18, en route to Villa Ahumada.

Capt. Boyd, Lieut. Adair and 28 men were in the party. The first day's march was from Dublan to Galeana River.

The second day's march from there to San Luis ranch on Santa Maria river.